The steam train to Clare is now just a whistle in the tunnel of time, but the Stationmaster's Residence lives on as an exceptional piece of Clare's history. The best-selling author Monica McInerney grew up here and her recollections of her childhood days as the stationmaster's daughter are happy memories that still resonate today.

Lovingly restored by owners Chris and Christine Jones, this historic home is available to one group at a time (or even a lucky couple wanting a stay in style). Subtle reminders of the home's past association with the golden age of rail can be found in train-related curios. But these nostalgic elements do not overshadow the quality interiors. Some historic homes can be a jumble of nicknacks, but Stationmaster's has been decorated with gorgeous furnishings and antiques.

This living treasure is fitted out to today's comfort standards, including a modern bathroom and gourmet kitchen. It is just a short stroll to Clare's main street and makes for an enchanting Clare Valley base. From here, you can spend lazy days discovering the area's many cellar doors and fabulous restaurants.
